CELEBRAING OUR WOMEN OF KULTURE

with Fadia Thompson

Fadia Thompson, who's from Spanish Town, Jamaica, W.I. She came to the United States at the age 8 years old, though she was young, she always considered herself blessed to have gotten my foundation of learning and understanding in Jamaica. It plays a huge part in every aspect of her life! Fadia mention's, there's an unspoken, almost unexplainable thing that we have as West Indians. It's like a spice you use in all your special dishes. It's obvious that it's there, it gives that right amount of extra flavor and life. It shows in the pride we have in our heritage, the way we love our culture, the way we feel music in our souls, but it goes beyond that. It also has everything to do with the way we've been educated, work ethic, and even our mannerisms. All these factors play a huge role in my values today. For example, as a 27-year-old woman she still finds it very hard to refer to any adult that I've known since childhood by just their first name, even when they insist on otherwise. She also knows that one of the reasons she so self-driven as entrepreneur is the fact that most of my life we have struggled financially.

Fadia goes on to say, she strongly believes being raised the way I was drove me to become the woman I am today. It also still drives me as I am walking in my purpose and operating in my destiny. I am a Millennial Entrepreneur. I work from home, and I help other people make money from home. I wish I could tell you I have an overnight success story, but I don't. What I will say is this little West Indian girl that was brought to America to live the "American Dream" made a decision to go against the grain and the path she was supposed to follow. After high school I had no idea what I wanted to do with my life, and I decided against going to college because by the time I got out of school I was over school. If I didn't know why I was going there was no point in me going! In case you are wondering, my parents were NOT ok with that at all.

As far as I was concerned my diploma could've been a blank piece of paper with a time served stamp. I was out of there! I spent my share of years slaving away in jobs I hated, questioning my decision to not continue my education, and making bad decisions like the rest of them. I even got away from my spiritual foundation and spent time not believing I had a purpose. However, when I got to my lowest, started doing personal development, which worked on the core of who I am it led me back to a better path.

A Team with One Dream helping to change lives around the world!

I started becoming a more mature and better version of the little girl that I was. She had dreams, goals, and visions, she always knew that she was going to do something great. Even though she did not know her plans for the future, she always saw herself as the CEO type and knew that her kids would never have to experience being poor. It also makes me that much more proud of how far I have come and now I'm Chief Executive Officer at www.FadiaThompson.com and Executive Director at Total Life Changes.
