She is first generation Haitian American and the third of four children to Haitian parents Claude and Marie Bissainthe. Ruby's father was born in Port-au-Prince and mother was from Cap-Haitien. They relocated from Haiti to New York in 1964 to Brooklyn New York and later raised their kids in upstate New York, Spring Valley. In 1974, they left New York to Orlando, Florida to raise their family. Ruby's parents were always giving back to the community and such a vital part of the Haitian community. Life's obstacles can seem overwhelming. When you are struggling to deal with issues such as health problems, the death of loved ones, prejudice, domestic violence, depression, and more, it can be all too easy to give up and allow yourself to be chained by your circumstances. But you can break your chains and overcome your obstacles.

In Broken Chains, author Ruby Mabry and seven others relate the stories of how they were empowered to overcome their personal trials. These women have dealt with hardship and yet continue to persevere. While some of them relate problems they have overcome in the past and others tell about present problems that are ongoing and will extend into the future, all of them have refused to be defeated by their challenges. Instead, they have chosen to break the chains of adversity and live with purpose.

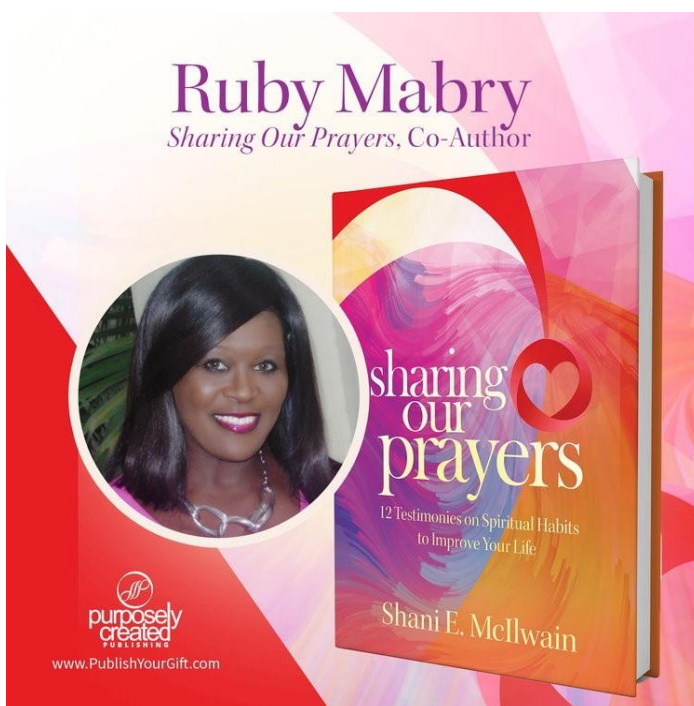

Ruby Mabry is an international bestselling author, the CEO of New Life Manor, Inc., a mental health facility, and the founder of the Live on Purpose Movement, through which she helps inspire women to live their true purpose. She has been featured on Mom Talk Radio, a nationally syndicated radio show for moms, as well as Huffington Post, NBC, Fox, and CBC News.
